A DIFFERENT KIND OF SHELTER

Dear Friends,

At Good Shepherd Center, we often say that shelter is just the beginning. And this year, more than ever, we've worked to show what "a different kind of shelter" really looks like.

It looks like stability—providing not just a safe place to rest, but the resources and support someone needs to build a better tomorrow. It looks like support—long-term housing placements, medical referrals, and meals served with dignity and kindness. And it looks like solutions—case managers who walk alongside our guests with compassion and persistence, helping them navigate next steps and complex systems.

That's what your support makes possible. This past year, we saw the need continue to grow—more seniors, more working families, and more Veterans, all turning to us in moments of crisis. But we also saw incredible resilience. We witnessed people take bold steps forward, and we were able to meet them with open arms because of you.

Every person who found permanent housing. Every child who went to bed safe and warm. Every guest who felt truly seen and valued. These victories belong to all of us.

Thanks to you, Good Shepherd Center has remained a place of refuge and restoration—an anchor in the storm. And thanks to you, we will continue to evolve, adapt, and lead with heart as we work to end homelessness in our region.

From all of us at Good Shepherd—our staff, our Board, and most importantly, our guests—thank you for being part of this mission. Thank you for being part of this family.

With deepest gratitude,

Katrina R. Knight
Executive Director

Kathy Denlinger
Board Chair

SECU The Sparrow:
A Groundbreaking Step Forward

On June 2, 2025, Good Shepherd Center broke ground on its newest Permanent Supportive Housing community—SECU The Sparrow, which will provide housing and on-site supports for 32 chronically homeless individuals with significant disabilities.

This milestone project builds on the success of SECU Lakeside Reserve and is part of Good Shepherd's broader commitment to not only offer emergency shelter but to end homelessness for our most vulnerable neighbors. "Many people know Good Shepherd Center for our emergency shelter and soup kitchen services," said Katrina Knight, Executive Director, "but just as important are our efforts to end the homelessness of some of our most challenged neighbors—people who have been homeless for long periods due to their significant disabilities."

Made possible through deep partnerships and a shared vision for lasting solutions, key funding for SECU The Sparrow came from the NC Housing Finance Agency's Supportive Housing American Rescue Plan (SHARP) program, which committed $2.91 million to the project.

The  Wilmington donated the land, followed by more than $2.1 million in American Rescue Plan funds and over $125,000 in pre-development support.

The SECU Foundation, a longtime partner in Good Shepherd's housing initiatives, contributed $2 million to the effort as a challenge grant, successfully leveraging additional support.

"The Foundation is committed to supporting housing solutions for vulnerable populations across our state," said Jama Campbell, Executive Director of the SECU Foundation, "and GSC's partnership has been invaluable as we work together to address these challenges through Permanent Supportive Housing."

Together, we are not just building structures—we are building solutions, one home at a time.

Zerick's Story:

From Unspeakable Loss to a Life Reclaimed

In 2022, everything changed for Mr. Zerick Jones.

Within just three weeks, he lost his wife, his brother, and his father. The grief was crushing. Searching for healing, Zerick left Wilmington and moved to Winston-Salem, hoping a change of scenery would help him rebuild.

But grief doesn't follow geography—and by August 2024, he found himself without a home.

Zerick returned to Wilmington, the city that raised him, holding onto only a sliver of hope that things could get better. That's when he was connected with the Sgt. Eugene Ashley Center—a place where Veterans like him find more than a bed. They find support. Stability.
A path forward.

"I didn't know the extent of my PTSD or how much it affected me,"* Zerick shared.

But through mental health services, therapy, and real community care, he began to recover.
And then—something beautiful happened.

In the midst of healing, Zerick rediscovered an old love: art. What began as a quiet return to creativity has since become a bold reawakening. He's now receiving art commissions and teaching classes through the Veterans Creative Arts Program, with workshops launching across Wilmington this spring.

In March, Zerick moved into his own apartment—with a home studio to continue his work.
Today, he's not just housed—he's creating again.
Contributing. Teaching. Thriving.

This is what support looks like.

This is what healing can become.

This is why we do the work.

Meet Cece:

Trusting the Road Home

There's a quiet kind of grief that comes when life unravels—and for Cece, that unraveling began with a car crash.

The accident left her wheelchair-bound, facing intensive physical therapy, and managing pain with medication. Then came the mounting medical bills, the loss of independence, and eventually, the terrifying reality of having nowhere to go.

Cece never imagined she would become homeless. But like so many who turn to Good Shepherd, her journey wasn't about poor choices—it was about too many burdens and too few options when everything changed.

At Good Shepherd Center, she found not just shelter, but stability. A Case Manager who listened. Peers who became a support system. Staff who met her with dignity and care. Still, when the time came to move into her own apartment, fear took hold.

For Cece—and many others—housing isn't the finish line. It can stir up old fears, loneliness, and uncertainty. The silence of your own space can feel heavy when you're used to living in survival mode. That's why Cece's journey isn't one of instant transformation. It's a story of learning to trust again—in herself, in others, and in Good Shepherd.

She had to believe she could manage life in her own space. That she wouldn't fall through the cracks again. And most importantly, that we weren't letting go of her just because she had crossed a threshold.

We weren't. We never do.

We walked with her through every step—checking in, troubleshooting, and simply showing up. Because the road from homelessness to housed isn't always direct. It's rarely easy. But it's worth traveling—with patience, grace, and presence.

Cece now has her own keys. Her own space. And a growing belief that she belongs.
At Good Shepherd, we meet people where they are. No cookie-cutter plans. No timelines imposed. Just a promise to walk alongside each guest—offering support and dignity throughout the journey.

Meet Damion

A kind note from one of our rehoused guests:

"The staff at Good Shepherd treat you like you matter. They notice when something's off—even when you don't say a word. They show up for you with kindness and care, and after a while, that starts to feel like family.

People think homelessness is just about money. But the truth is, if you've ever felt alone, and like you didn't matter—then you already know what homelessness feels like. And that feeling can break you.

When I came here, I was lost. But slowly, I started finding pieces of myself again. And when I started finding myself, I started loving myself. That changed everything. Good Shepherd gave me a place to start over—but even more than that, they reminded me I still had something to offer. Everyone belongs to someone.

And now I know—I do too."

- Damion
